

UNICORN NEWSLETTER EXTRA! May 2009

Marquee Crisis latest...

This is just to let you know (some concern was being expressed!) that thanks to Bob shopping around, the marquees are only going to cost twice as much as usual instead of thrice. So that's sort of good news; money will still be tight this year, but at least we're not expecting the bailiffs! On the positive side, the tents will be brighter, cleaner, and in better repair than our usual ones.

Responsible Tourism

Rina Vergano has nominated Unicorn Camps under the 'Best Destination' category in this year's 'Responsible Tourism' awards, if you feel moved to do likewise, here's some info about it:

It's that time again! The 2009 Virgin Holidays Responsible Tourism Awards are now open for your nominations!

This is responsibletravel.com's sixth year of running the Responsible Tourism Awards and we really need your help to find holiday companies that are, one way or another, trying to make a difference to our world and the people who live in it. We wanted to say a big thank you for nominating in our 2008 Awards (you can read all about last year's winners here), and to see if you have an organisation, accommodation, tour operator or individual in mind to nominate in this year's Awards!

From the outset, the Awards have been aimed at making a fuss of those organisations putting responsible tourism at the core of their business. While some companies shout their eco credentials from the rooftops, others play their cards a bit closer to their chest – and that's where you come in! Every year the Awards have relied on travellers keen to share their holiday tips, secrets and know-how to help us honour the best of the best in responsible tourism. Last year we received over 1900 nominations from travellers around the world and this year we're hoping for your help once again. Read all about the Awards here: www.responsibletourismawards.com

As before, you are free to nominate in one, some or all of the 13 Award categories, but each organisation may only be nominated in one category.

Nominate a winner in any of our 13 categories and you could win a safari holiday for 2 to Kenya from Gamewatchers Safaris & Porini Camps! Last year Gamewatchers were one of our Award winners, and we're delighted to have them supporting the Awards by offering one of the holidays that put them on the responsible tourism map. Find out more about the prize holiday here: <http://www.responsibletourismawards.com/prizeholiday.htm>

We look forward to receiving your nominations! www.responsibletourismawards.com/nominations

Best wishes,

Alex